'Desecration' is a contemporary novel and is a forerunner to my first novel 'Extinction'. It deals with the radical ambitions of a group of environmental activist/terrorists and their vengeful initiatives designed to make examples of sinners against animals and ecosystems alike. The novel uses genuine research regarding diseases and the way they can potentially mutate, both naturally and by human design, to create a global conspiracy theory concerning the engineering of diseases to satisfy both political and environmental objectives. The environmental goal is simply to reduce the global population and thereby demand for the earth's resources.
